2. If so, to what relief is the workman entitled?

2. In response to notices issued by the Tribunal, parties filed their written statements. The main contention of the workmen represented by the Allahabad Bank Indian Staff Association (hereafter referred to as the Union) was that the workman concerned (namely Shri Rambali Singh) was an active and senior member of the Union; that there was another rival union working in the same Bank; that the Bank wanted to favour that union; that with this view they transferred the workman from the Calcutta branch to the South Calcutta branch; that it was a case of victimisation; that the Bank should be ordered to retransfer the workman to the Calcutta Branch and to refund the amount incurred by him on account of conveyance charges and also to pay him compensation at the rate of Rs. 150/- per month.

3. The Bank denied the allegations of the union and contended that the workman was transferred in due course; that they had every right to do so and that it should be ordered that the workman was not entitled to any relief.

4. When the matter came up for hearing before me on 21st September 1964, after some discussions, it was suggested to the Bank whether they would be willing to transfer this workman to any other branch in Calcutta city. It also transpired that the workman concerned was willing to work in any other branch other than the South Calcutta branch. The parties took time till the next day to consider the matter that day.

5. When the matter again came up before me on the 22nd, I was informed on behalf of the Bank that the workman concerned had been transferred by them from the South Calcutta branch to the Burra Bazar Branch (which branch is situated in Calcutta city). On this, the Union informed me that in view of the transfer of the workman to the Burra Bazar branch, they did not want to proceed further in the matter.

6. The transfer of a workman is ordinarily the management's function and they can transfer a workman in due course if they think it necessary to do for their business purposes. The Tribunal would not interfere in this normal work of a transfer unless it is satisfied that the transfer was to victimise the person. The Union also did not dispute this proposition. The workman concerned was transferred from the Calcutta branch to the South Calcutta branch. It appears that the workman concerned found it very inconvenient to work there. As a result of discussions that took place, the Bank was prepared to consider his transfer to any other branch and have actually transferred him to the Burra Bazar Branch. The result is that the Bank's stand that it has power to transfer a workman from one branch to another has been vindicated. On the other hand, the workman's inconvenience has been redressed. That is why the Union also do not want to proceed with the matter.

7. In the result, no further orders are necessary and the reference is disposed to as being not pressed. Parties will bear their own costs.

Sd/- L. P. DAVE,
Presiding Officer.
